

2006

Diary of Australia

A DIARY OF MULTICULTURAL EVENTS

Bell Huang

December

Discovered in South American and African alkaline lakes, Spirulina is a nutritious fresh water algae that is now widely used as a health food supplement.

Bell Huang's family company, TAAU Australia Pty Ltd, conducted five years of research and development on Spirulina before actively seeking overseas markets. Based in the Northern Territory, the company provides jobs for the local workforce and exports almost 100 per cent of the product. Winning an Australian Export Award in 2003, Taiwanese-born Bell has taken 250 acres of hot, harsh bush to build a high tech industry in the Top End.